Test-Score Banding in Human Resource Selection Herman Aguinis,2004-02-28 Virtually everyone is subjected to one form or another of testing. We are tested to get into schools and once we are in schools. We are often tested when we apply for a job and once we get a job. In spite of the pervasiveness and criticality of decisions made based on test scores, testing has been, and continues to be, a source of controversy. Is testing equally fair to all people? Are decisions based on tests fair to all members of society? Test-score banding is a method to interpret test scores that takes into account the fact that tests used in human resource selection are never perfectly accurate. This book analyzes the use of test-score banding from technical, legal, and societal points of view. It includes controversial arguments in favor and against the use of test-score banding, useful guidelines for practice, and innovative suggestions for research. For the past decade, organizations have relied on banding to select employees by forming groups of bands of applicants based on their scores on tests, interviews, and any other measure. Because test scores are never perfectly accurate, these bands render applicants within the same band indistinguishable. Secondary criteria, such as ethnicity and gender, then are used to break the tie, allowing organizations to increase diversity by increasing the proportion of employees who are members of underrepresented groups.

Restandardization of the Armed Forces Women's Selection Test, AFWST 5 and 6 Leonard C. Seeley, 1965 Since operational conversion tables for the Armed Forces Women's Selection Test (AFWST-5 and -6)-based on a 1961 Air Force standardization--appeared to be scaled somewhat high for WAC potential enlistees, research was undertaken to bring the norms up to date. The tests were restandardized on a sample of 400 WAC enlisted women going through basic training at the WAC Center, and the new norms instituted. As a further evaluation, the basic trainee sample was doubled by including 400 women entering basic training in succeeding classes, and norms were again computed, this time on the larger group. Data were also obtained on 1000 examinees processed at Armed Forces Examining Stations in order to include rejected applicants, and norms were computed on the wider range sample. At the same time, data were obtained by which to analyze the effectiveness of the AFWST as predictor of performance in basic training and in a clerical training course. In the conversion based on the first WAC basic training sample, percentile scores for a given raw score were higher than in the earlier Air Force conversion, and permitted acceptance of a larger percentage of applicants. The two subsequent conversions based on WAC samples were almost identical with the first. The AFWST was found to be an effective predictor of academic grade in basic training. With respect to the clerical course, prediction was substantial both for academic grade and for total grade.

Nonparametric Smoothing and Lack-of-Fit Tests Jeffrey Hart, 2013-03-14 An exploration of the use of smoothing methods in testing the fit of parametric regression models. The book reviews many of the existing methods for testing lack-of-fit and also proposes a number of new methods, addressing both applied and theoretical aspects of the model checking problems. As such, the book is of interest to practitioners of statistics and researchers investigating either lack-of-fit tests or nonparametric smoothing ideas. The first four chapters introduce the problem of estimating regression functions by nonparametric smoothers, primarily those of kernel and Fourier series type, and could be used as the foundation for a graduate level course on nonparametric function estimation. The prerequisites for a full appreciation of the book are a modest knowledge of calculus and some familiarity with the basics of mathematical statistics.
